

Hello!

My name is Mary Ann Janda. I am a Professor of English at Utica College. My graduate degrees are in English Literature and Composition and Rhetoric. I am a writing teacher. I am presently the director of the Utica College Writing Center, the director of the Mohawk Valley Writing Project. I regularly teach writing courses for the college.

I have worked in Writing Centers throughout my academic career. I am committed to the idea of the Writing Center as an integral part of the academic community. I thoroughly believe in our Writing Center motto, "A serious conversation about writing . . ."

If no one is on duty in the Writing Center and I am not teaching or otherwise occupied, I am available as a tutor. Please feel free to stop in my office, 201 Faculty Center, if you don't see me in the Center.

Thanks for your interest in the Utica College Writing Center!
