When hiring new workers, employers must give them written notice of their rate of pay and the regular payday. This notice must be given on an official form from the New York State Department of Labor.

Written notice helps to avoid misunderstandings and pay disputes, and to resolve them if they occur.

The written notice is required to comply with Labor Law, Section 195.1. Employers can view guidelines and download the required form on our website at www.labor.ny.gov.

Pay Rate

Starting on October 26, 2009, New York State Labor Law requires employers to give newly hired employees a written notice of:

- Their rate of pay, including overtime rate of pay.
- Their regular payday.

You must give the employees this notice at the time of hiring, before they do any work.

Overtime

Written notice must state the overtime rate of pay, if it applies.

If the employee is covered by an overtime provision of the labor law, the written notice also must include:

- The overtime rate of pay.

Most employees must receive overtime pay at 1 1/2 times their regular rates of pay for all hours of work over 40 in a given week. For example, workers who are paid $8 per hour must receive $12 per hour for all hours worked over 40 per week. This applies to all workers who are covered by the overtime requirement even if they receive a weekly rate.

Several very limited occupations are not covered by the overtime pay provisions of the Labor Law, such as farm workers and professionals.

Payday

The regular payday

The regular payday must be at least:
- weekly for manual workers,
- twice a month for clerical and other workers, and
- monthly for commissioned salespeople.

Signed Receipt

The employer must have the employee sign a statement acknowledging receipt of the written notice and must keep the signed statement for six years.

Workers

When you are hired, your employer must give you a written notice of your pay rate and the regular payday.

Written notice helps to avoid misunderstandings and pay disputes, and to resolve them if they occur.

Your employer MUST do this to comply with Labor Law, Section 195.1

Pay Rate
Starting on October 26, 2009, New York State Labor Law requires employers to give new employees a written notice of:
- Your rate of pay, including overtime rate of pay.
- Your regular payday.

You must get this notice when you are hired, before you do any work.

Overtime
If you qualify for overtime, the written notice also must include:
- Your overtime rate of pay.

Most workers must receive overtime pay at 1½ times their regular pay rate for all hours of work over 40 in a week. For example, if your regular rate is $8 per hour, you must must receive $12 per hour for all hours over 40 per week. If you are covered by the overtime requirement, then you must receive overtime pay, even if you are paid a weekly rate.

Several very limited groups of workers are not covered by overtime, such as farm workers and professionals.

Payday
The regular payday must be at least:
- weekly for manual workers,
- twice a month for clerical and other workers, and
- monthly for commissioned salespeople.

Signed Receipt
The employer must have you sign a paper that says you got the written notice. The employer must keep your signed statement for six years.

Save the written notice of your pay rate that the employer gave you when you were hired. It will help if there is ever a question about your wages.
