Why Consider Identity Theft Protection?

Data Breaches Are Greatest Risk Factor

Data breaches are the greatest risk factor for identity fraud, with 904 million records exposed by data breaches in 2014. Studies show that individuals who receive a data breach notification letter are more than four times as likely to become victims of identity theft. In addition, average out-of-pocket costs are over 200% higher for victims of data breach.

Tax Refund Fraud On The Rise

Tax refund fraud is expected to hit $21 billion by 2016, up from just $6.5 billion two years prior according to the IRS.

Impact of Our Always Connected World

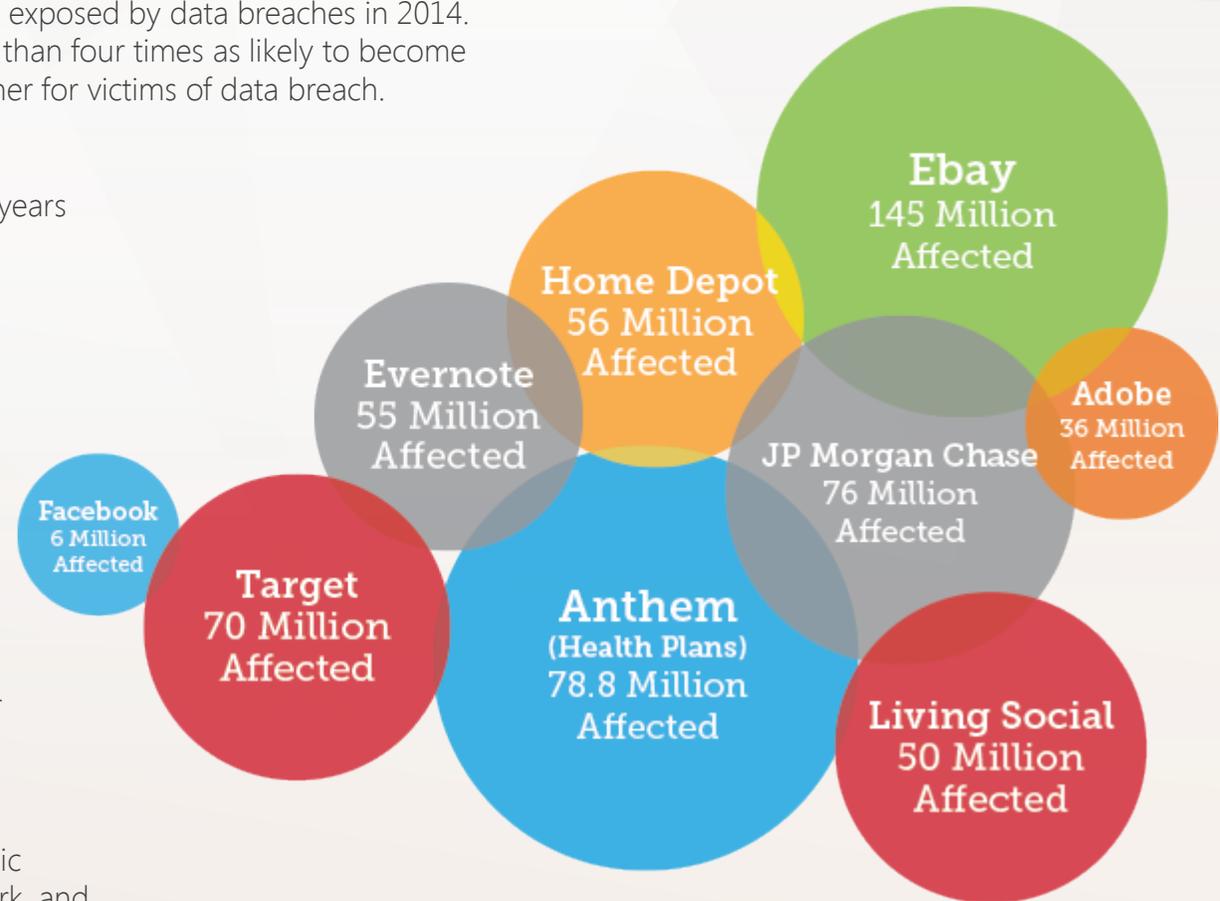

According to a report done by Javelin Strategy; Research, smartphone users are 35% more likely to experience fraud than the average consumer. One-third of smartphone and tablet owners save personal information on their devices, but only 16% have installed software capable of remotely wiping the device if stolen. That's a lot of people carrying around an identity jackpot.

Children Are Vulnerable

A Carnegie Mellon CyLab 2009-2010 study, the largest child ID theft report ever published, came to some sobering conclusions. First, 10.2 percent of children in the report had someone else using their Social Security number—that's 51 times higher than the rate for adults in the same population.

Easy Access to Public WI-FI

Wi-Fi hotspots in coffee shops, libraries, airports, hotels, universities, and other public places are convenient, but often they're not secure. If you connect to a Wi-Fi network, and send information through websites or mobile apps, it might be accessed by someone else.

Evaluate Your Options.

More Than Your Social Security Number

Your protection should monitor a wider spectrum of identifying information beyond just your Social Security number. Your protection should alert you of suspicious activity involving your identity.

Credit Monitoring Alone Isn't Enough

Credit monitoring alone may not come close to tracking all of your information that's out in the world. In fact, credit monitoring can miss identity fraud beyond your credit card, or can be delayed in alerting you to potential fraud.

DIY Identity Monitoring Isn't Realistic

ID theft protection is more than a full-time job. The time, complexity and expertise needed to monitor your identity make doing-it-yourself unrealistic.

Protection Requires Resolution

ID theft protection is not complete without the ability to resolve crimes or debts falsely created in your name. It's wise to use dedicated professionals with industry knowledge and experience.

Data Brokers May Sell Your Information

Some credit monitoring companies are also known as data brokers – Selling personal consumer data to various parties.
