UC PEOPLE

Meet Art Langdon, Executive Chef

Colleen Bierstine '15

Q. Tell us a little about yourself.

A. I have three kids who keep me very busy; I tote them back and forth to various sports practices. I like trying to expand their palates when I cook and get them involved in the kitchen. I'll get their help making

Q: What does your position as executive chef entail?

A: I've been here for about eight years, and I'm responsible for an array of things. I do menu planning, and obviously, order and prepare food. I oversee staff operations and cater all kinds of on and off-campus events. I'll also meet with faculty, staff and students to see what they do or don't like.

Q: What do you enjoy most about the position?

A: It is challenging, and nothing is ever the same. In the world of food particularly, things are constantly changing, whether it be food trends, allergies or diets. There's no time to get bored. I also get to experiment with different types of foods because of UC's diverse community. We'll make sushi one day and Indian food another. In fact, I had the opportunity homemade mac and cheese, and other things they will be interested in. For fun, I like to golf and fish. I also love partaking in winter sports, like ice skating with the kids.

"Best of all, there is a fantastic core staff, and I enjoy working with the campus community."

opportunity of making an assortment of ethnic food for the International Students Day in November. But best of all, there is a fantastic core staff, and I enjoy working with the campus community. I get to follow some kids through their entire four-year journey here.

Q: How did you become interested in the culinary world?

A: I actually went to school for advertising and communication at Mohawk Valley Community College. It wasn't until I worked at a restaurant in Massachusetts that I really got hooked on cooking. I also spent time in my brother-in-law's meat market where I learned how to work with meat. There was something so gratifying about watching something go from raw to a plated, finished product. After that, I worked with a catering company, which taught me the cooking, serving and execution skills that are essential in my position here.

Q: How does your degree in advertising and communication come into play now?

A: When you take advertising and different communication classes, you use your artistic creativity to send a message, whether it be through a billboard, an ad, or the like. And when you cook, you're still using those aspects and thought processes, but in a more intimate way. You still need those skills.

Q: What do you get most excited about cooking?

A: I love cooking everything, but my favorite has to be a simple weekend family breakfast or a holiday meal. That's the most heartfelt thing. A Sunday morning meal might include chocolate chip pancakes, some black pepper bacon, eggs, and fresh Italian toast.
